We are 90 miles southeast of Buffalo, 80 miles south of Rochester, in the heart of the Southern Tier. Alfred is known as a college town. There are two institutions of higher education: Alfred State College and Alfred University, which includes The New York State College of Ceramics, with a student population of approximately 5,185. The village of Alfred has a population of about 3,990. Union University Church is a multi-denominational and congregationally governed community church, with an average weekly attendance of 40-50. Membership is approximately 75 and the church was founded over 100 years ago. Even though our population is small, and because of our unique multi-denominational nature, our congregation comes from many of the surrounding towns, including Wellsville, Almond, Hornell, Arkport, Canaseraga and Andover.
